

ABSTRACT

A system, method and article of manufacture are provided for a knowledgebase framework. A network is utilized to access one or more sources. Information from the source is then extracted utilizing the network. The format of the extracted information is converted into a common format. An index is generated for the information utilizing a knowledge model. The generated index is then stored in a database.